

MOUSTAPHA BEY ARRIVES

He Is a Pleasant Man, who Says in English
That He Doesn't Know Anything About

Moustapha Tahsin Bey, the new Turkish Minister to the United States, arrived in this city on the American line steamship St. Paul yesterday. Seifitan Bey, the second Secretary of the Legation, accompanied him. They were driven to the Waldorf, where the Minister received the Turkish Consul and several of his countrymen resident in this city. This is the Minister's second visit to this country. In stature Moustapha Bey is below the average height, and he has a slight stoop. He has the dark complexion of the Turk and wears a

The new Minister is no stranger in New York, as he was in this country from 1883 to 1891, a mission of which he was charged with that time was purchasing rifles for the Turkish Government. During his stay, he

When asked concerning the present Armenian troubles, he was very reticent and his words were ambiguous.

"When I left Constantinople," he continued, "everything was peaceful. The Armenians and the Turks were in a state of amity. The people are satisfied with their rulers, and the country is more prosperous than ever."

He said the Hancock's mission was news to him, and he refused to discuss it. The Sultan, he said, was anxious to maintain the present friendly relations with this Government, and he will do everything in his power to keep them so.

When asked what he put in his mind concerning the present election in this country, he said that personally he was for gold. The Republic, he said, was the best thing that had happened to the country at heart, and the people abroad,

The Minister's stay at the Waldorf will be a short one, as he starts for Washington at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. He says he intends to see something of this city before he leaves, but no arrangements have been made yet.

Monstahpa. He was in the foreign office, as assistant to the Second Secretary of State. He has been in the foreign office for about thirty years. He is now 46 years old. He was born in the city of Moscow. He was the Minister whom Monstahpa. He succeeds, has been in this country for eleven years. He was his own desire that he should be recalled.

THE FAMILY WERE STARVING.

One Member Died of Starvation and Two, Kellier Suved the Life of Another.

A call for an understanding to build a bridge, a 10 mile long bridge, was made, a singular case of destitution in Belleville, N. J., yesterday morning, and the investigation which followed indicates that the boy, who was quite delicate, starved to death. His father, John Swan of Cortlandt street, is a carpenter who has been in the city for many years. He has three children, and in spite of persistent efforts to get work, he failed utterly. He has been too proud to reveal his condition to his neighbors or to the public. Meanwhile his family have been liv-

The discovery made by the undertaker and Justice Connell is supposed to have averted a second death in the family. The family was abundantly supplied with food yesterday, and the undertaker is confident that the child will live. It is difficult for the people of Belleville to understand a nature such as Swan has exhibited. They think that such sensitiveness as he has shown is akin to derangement, and they wonder that the children of the judges should be so much affected. Justice Connell, the Mayor and Druggist A. H. Osborne started a subscription fund yesterday to raise money to bury the dead boy and relieve the distress of the family.
